

Requirements Interview and Observations

09-09-2026

Interviewee: c/PFC Moucheng (Thomas) Yang

Interviewer: Liam Pheng

Question: What are your current responsibilities in the battalion?

TY: I'm just a joe (standard soldier) in the battalion. I don't really have any leadership responsibilities so I just do what I'm told and go to PT and stuff.

Question: How does technological communication apps like Microsoft Teams play a role in what you do?

TY: We use teams pretty much every day. Dragotta (Yang's squad leader) gives us the list of things we need to do throughout the week on teams, but we also text a lot outside of it just because it's convenient.

Question: Do you ever have confusion using different apps for communication?

TY: No, using the apps are pretty straight forward. It's just texting no matter what you use.

Question: Do you ever get misinformed or don't see information because of the multiple channels of information?

TY: Sometimes. For the most part information is sent out across text and teams but every once in a while I forget to look at something or a slide (Concept of Operations Slideshow) has not been updated. So yeah, I guess that it can get confusing.

Demonstration: Can you show me how you utilize teams and group me for pushing out information?

Observations:

- Thomas displayed same Microsoft Teams channels that Jack Malenock displayed
- Thomas showed me his texts with his squad leader with a mix of informal personal communication as well as squad information

Question: What features would you need or like to see in a military focused communication/accountability app?

TY: something I really want to see is a communal place for all information that people can go to. Develop something with chat communication and event tracking.